In this modern day and age, where medicine has become an industry and people don't trust drugs that haven't fully been tested and relied upon, it is comforting to go back to our roots in nature and consider the healing benefits of herbs. Herbs can have a huge range of wonderful benefits, and the best part is that we can grow them in our own backyards. They don't generally take a lot of effort, and growing them ourselves is a great reason to get out of the house and away from the many screens in our lives so that we can really get in touch with a more primal aspect of ourselves. Growing herbs is fun, easy, and empowering. If you are suffering from a headache or stomach cramps, what could be more rewarding than walking into our own gardens and picking out just the right herb to help us? It's possibly one of the best things we could do for ourselves, and even if we don't need them right away, we can harvest and dry them ourselves for future use. It's a great system!
